WHO IS THIS CONFERENCE FOR?

Our annual conferences are designed to help presbytery leaders (staff, committees, volunteers) learn about the essential best ministry practices at the presbytery level that promote clergy wellness in a pro-active way rather than simply responding to crises situations dealing with ministers. The plenary sessions this year will focus on three different models for nurturing competent church leaders in the practice of ministry and how COMs and CPMs can develop supportive yet honest ways to build effective pastoral leadership. Our Conference leaders will address the changes that are taking place in the PCUSA and how ministry leaders will need to adapt to these changes for the 21st century Church. Several workshops will be offered to help participants to share resources and ideas that will help presbyteries to meet these challenges.

ABOUT OUR THEME AND PRESENTERS

Our conference this year is aimed at helping presbyteries learn about practical models for supporting pastors in ways that strengthen their leadership capacities, deepen their spiritual life, and encourage accountability for effective ministries. Our conference leaders include:

Marcia Myers— the Director of the Vocation Office of the GAC offices of the PC (USA)

Dr. Laurie Ferguson - the Director of the Auburn Coaching Institute, a consultant, and a PCUSA minister.

Joe Sandifer -the pastor to pastors in the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta.

Rev. Samuel Hamilton-Poore, D. Min. SFTS
Professor of Spiritual Direction

In addition to the plenary presentations, participants will have the opportunity to engage in conversations and attend workshops that will address specific strategies that presbyteries can develop to promote healthy church leaders for the challenges facing the PCUSA in the 21st century.
